

30% Savings on Software Law Firm Dumps Thomson Reuters, Creates Tech Stack

The Challenge

Attorney Jennifer Williams made the switch from Big Law to open her own law firm, Summa LLC, with the idea that everything would be intentional - from the cases they take to the way the lawyers work. In Big Law, she used Thomson Reuters practice management software, but found that she didn't use most of the features.

Jenn wanted software without all the bells and whistles that they weren't going to use. She needed legal billing, document management, timekeeping, calendaring, and communication. She knew she didn't want practice management software.

Benefits of LeanLaw

- No waste! Use ALL the software: timekeeping, billing, reporting
- 30% Savings Per User on law firm software
- LeanLaw Developers work with clients to improve features

The Solution

Jenn stitched together a tech stack to mimic practice management software without the bulk of all of the features that would go to waste: QuickBooks and LeanLaw for the accounting and financial workflow, Dropbox for document management, and Google Workspace for email and calendaring. That's it!

The price point was 30% lower and the results more nimble. Jennifer has even worked with LeanLaw developers to tweak a feature that they needed to accommodate their specific approach to a workflow.

30% Savings
Per User on law firm software

Customize workflows
with anti-practice management tech stack

2x Faster
Onboarding Clients

“The price point was better with LeanLaw. It felt more nimble and more matching with our ethos: don't pay for stuff that you don't need. That's what we try to tell our clients, too.”

- JENNIFER WILLIAMS, SUMMA LLC